

Handmade Carnival Activities Some ideas

If you're hosting a Carnival Party, you can hire games booths, or on top of that make your own. To make a simple carnival game booth, you need a small table, a towel big enough to drape within the table (brightly colored if possible), a large bit of card and some paints or thick marker pens.

You just drape the cloth over the table, letting it hang down the leading of the table to the ground. Using your paints, or marker pens, write out an enjoyable sign, stating the name of the game- you may be really creative here! Finally attach the sign to the cloth and there you've it- your individual homemade carnival game booth. In the event that you really want to look authentic, buy some cheap, narrow, plastic piping (available from hardware stores), cut into lengths to make a rectangular frame for the booth (you'll need one long one, just a touch longer than your table length, and two shorter ones (decide how high you wish the frame to be).

Use strong tape to bind the items of tubing together to make a three sided rectangle, then attach to the table, again securing with strong tape. You are able to hang a lightweight sign from this, but be considered a little careful- the frame won't tolerate an excessive amount of weight. You can buy ready made games to make use of in your booths if you wish. However, you may make your own. Keep food cans, and rinse these out and dry off. Cover these cans with vibrant colored paper and use to compare for the Knock the Can game. Add several bean bags- and your game is preparing to play. To play, the guest throws the bean bags, one at a time, at the cans. If they knock all of the cans over, they win. For the Coconut Shy, you should purchase a few fresh coconuts. To really make the means the coconuts, use empty soda bottles which were rinsed out and dried. Slice the tops off the bottles and cover them with vibrant colored paper. Place the bottles on the top of the table booth, spaced well apart, and put the coconuts on the top of bottles. Have three small balls, or bean bags, per turn, and you are prepared to play.

To play, the party guest tosses the bean bags, or balls, one at time, at the coconuts. Should they knock one off, they win. Toss the Ball is an easy game to make. Cover a waste paper basket with brightly colored paper, stick it at the trunk of the booth, or on the ground. Place a marker a fair distance away from the basket. This really is where in actuality the party guests will stand to take their turns. Use any ball you like- for example a basketball or perhaps a baseball- it must squeeze into the goal waste paper basket.
