

The Importance of Nadi Dosha in Horoscope Matching

It is strongly believed that even if the matching points or the Guna Milan score is high, one should not marry in the same Nadi. This will seriously affect the married life and family happiness. There is also danger and health issues to the progeny.

There are 28 matching points if we subtract 8 points which are prescribed for Nadi. Incidentally when there is zero in front of Nadi it is considered a dosha. However the point that I'm making is that inspite of the high score we see that is 28 out of 36 total points, marriage is not recommended since there is a Nadi Dosha.

There is another very important reason because of which marriage between the same Nakshatras is not recommended. Such people are likely to have the same planetary period. This is very important to bhakoot dosha cancellation note as the Dasha period is considered from the birth Nakshatra.

Therefore if the planets are well placed both will have good time, but if they are ill placed then both will have bad time simultaneously. Good or Bad effects will thus get multiplied. Good effects are welcome though, but the ill effects may become difficult to bear.

As a Vedic astrologer with past experience of more than 15 years in astrology reading, especially relationship and horoscope matching, please note that high matching points in Guna Milan are not a guarantee to happy married life. The most important is the placements of the planets in the natives horoscopes. If your 7th house and the lord is strong and the karka which is Venus in a female chart and Jupiter in a male chart are strong and well placed, the native will be bestowed with marital happiness. A Grah Milan which is matching of the planets is more important than Guna Milan and remedies for any dosha in kundli Milan like Nadi, Mangal, Bhakoot should be done before solemnizing marriage.
