

Frequent Veranda Types

But choosing the right shape depends upon many factors including:

- Size of your property
- What size you would like the room to be

How you intend on utilizing the space

Once you choose these details, you can choose the space the most effective suits your needs. All verandas are made out of colorbond steel, which means the structure is durable and may be custom painted to match your home or painted in a shade that contrasts your home color to incorporate even more visual interest.

CURVED DESIGN

A curved design will give your property elegance and create an engaging place to possess dinner parties with friends and family. These verandas can be attached to your house or can be found as free standing structures.

With the curved veranda style, you can include a flat roof to the structure to make it larger and add much more dimension. You can even put in a curved piece to your existing veranda for added elegance.

FLAT DESIGN

For a far more traditional look with clean, polished lines, an apartment roofed veranda will add beauty to your house all year long. You are able to choose from four different styles that allow you to change the direction of the roof sheets for added dimension, or you are able to choose a long version that provides you added space.

If you have a smaller home, an apartment design could make your property appear larger. An apartment design is also great for square or rectangular shaped homes.

SUNROOF DESIGN

If you intend to allow more sunlight into your outdoor space, a sunroof design with adjustable roof is an ideal choice. Allow light breezes and cool night air into the space as well. Electronic louvres are controlled by a remote so it is possible to open and close them whenever you want.
