

Door Handles - Choosing Someone to Match Your Home

Home furnishing stores and handyman shops carry many interesting designs, usually ranging from Georgian to modern minimalist, mainly to execute the general architecture of private and public structures.

People who fancy traditional or antique designs may prefer a Georgian look, which is the styles that appeared from 1720 to 1840 and named after the four British monarchs of that time period who were all named George. Its simplicity and proportion still grace many buildings on the planet today, from private homes to government offices. Generally, a Georgian house has a flat front with sash windows and a Palladian door set back a couple of inches from the façade wall. If you have a Georgian home, your Entry way handles would look superb with an easy brass Front door handles knob. When you have kids, an aged or a person with disability living within your house, a better option is really a brass Front door handles lever, as it now is easier to use when comparing to a knob.

The Victorian era also influenced building designs over the globe. This ornate and grandiose architecture named after Queen Victoria herself features the front door handles since the focal point of the facade. Small intricate windows and colors give life to the hardwood Entry way handles. In the event that you fancy its grandeur, you'd want to see stores offering crystal glass or porcelain Entry way handles. Some of the said types would complete a good Victorian picture.

Like the Victorian but less opulent are Edwardian houses. Just like the Georgian and the Victorian designs, the Edwardian is named also after the British ruler seated during the time the architectural style was current. During King Edward VII's rule, the main entrance Door handles often feature subtly stained glass windows. Some were also painted with vivid red or green. Brass knockers and knobs are the devices usually attached with them.

In addition to the classical types of architectural design, Art Deco or Moderne structures are often observed in many different countries. The influence of geometric shapes, asymmetrical lines and bright colors adorn houses of the style. Their Entry way handles normally have colored glasses in cubes, triangles and other geometric patterns. Polished brass or polished chrome plated brass Entry way handles would match these.
