

Wonderful Shanghai

If you're coming from Shanghai's Pudong airport, make a fantastic entrance into the city via the world's fastest train, the Maglev, which runs from the airport to the Lujiazui Financial district. Kids will have a strong desire to "fly" over the ground, forced upwards into the air by virtue of a solid magnetic field. The lack of surface contact allows you to travel incredible speeds: as much as 433 km per hour. Make sure you show your airport when you have one; this grants you a slight discount on the train ride.

Jade Buddha Temple is an attractive place to start your Jade Buddha Temple. Though built relatively recently (between 1911 and 1918), the temple's upturned pagoda-like eaves and vivid red and yellow walls draw on centuries of Chinese architectural tradition. After admiring the colorful exterior, take a go through the treasures inside, the center-piece of the temple's namesake: an enormous white jade Buddha, covered in jewels, measuring nearly 2 meters high and believed to weigh on one thousand kilograms.

After inspecting the cultural treasures in the temple, take a look at Yuyuan gardens. With its beautiful layout and harmonious mixture of water, plants, zigzagging bridges, and dragon-lined walls, the gardens offer an unqualified introduction to the classical Dynasty Dynasty style. Lots of the buildings house, cultural artifacts including centuries-old furniture, artwork and literature. Kids will relish the Exquisite Jade Rock, a 5-ton porous, translucent and oddly-shaped mineral. After wandering through the gardens, read the bazaar just outside and browse through traditional Chinese products and jewelry.

If you're tired after wandering through the gardens, you'll be disappointed with the sights, think about the Huangpu River, the longest river that passes through Shanghai. You are able to choose from which cruises which run from 30 minutes to 3.5 hours. This is a good, relaxing way to consume both historic and modern elements of the city. You'll go by British colonial architecture on the city's east side (Bund) in addition to the futuristic skyline on the east east side (Pudong).

After taking in the sights of Shanghai, why do not you indulge in a little shopping? An excellent place to start is Xintiandi, a pedestrian zone shopping center built in restored shikumen, typically Shanghainese buildings which include both Western and Chinese architectural styles. Combined with the upscale shopping options, you can choose from an array of international restaurants - even the pickiest eater will see something to satisfy!

While it's still daylight, head to the utmost of Jin Mao (literally "Golden Prosperity Building") to Shanghai's skyline. At 88 floors high, it is only as eclipsed as the 2nd tallest building in China.

The show with the unforgettable show of the Shanghai Acrobats. The jaw-dropping feats of strength and daring in conjunction with colorful costumes and props can keep everyone at the edge of their seats for the whole show.
